D.R.E.A.M. Lands Feature on Carnegie Mellon University's Website

New York, NY, November 30, 2011 - D.R.E.A.M. (Developing Responsible Economically Advanced Model-Citizens, Inc.), and Jaleni Thompson, Co-Founder were featured on Carnegie Mellon's homepage. The highlight signifies a "humbling and grateful milestone for me and more importantly D.R.E.A.M.," according to Mr. Thompson.

He went on to note, "I view this feature as a testament to the diligence of my team and the growing number of constituents we serve. Underrepresented, inner-city youth badly need more role-models who they can relate to; and they also need to understand the importance of money management, especially at a time when much of the world is on the brink of potential economic calamity."

When asked if he was motivated at all by the feature, Thompson modestly replied, "I'm motivated primarily by the need of our mission in the community. But of course the feature is motivation; recognition by such a great educational institution is positive reinforcement for our cause — leading youth to financial empowerment!"
